Rothesay's history dates back to 1860, when the town was settled as a shipbuilding centre and an ideal location for summer homes and cottages for Saint John's wealthy inhabitants. In 1998, amalgamation saw the communities of East Riverside-Kinghurst, Fairvale, Renforth, Rothesay and Wells form one town under the name of Rothesay. The five communities are represented in the town's motto, Quinque Iuncta In Uno, which translates to Five United In One.

Often referred to, and self-proclaimed as a 'bedroom community' to the nearby city of Saint John, New Brunswick, Rothesay has become a leading residential choice in the province due to its low tax rates, plentiful recreation options and proximity to amenities offered by Saint John.

"One of the things we promote Rothesay as is a great place to live, raise your family and have recreation facilities," says Mayor of
